suitable to the wants of amateur-fanciers, who need some guide to the more successful growth of many of the numerous varieties which now fill up the catalogues of nurserymen; varying oftentimes as much in their habit as they do in colour, and necessarily requiring different treatment to bloom them in equal perfection. To supply this information, is the purpose of this work, and the object has been very well accomplished by the author."—(Hovey's Magazine of Horticulture, p. 181.)
